Before the Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis Monday were begun the arguments of counsel in the government's suit to dissolve the Standard Off Company of New Jersey as an illegal and outlaw monopoly, the search for evidence having lasted for two years. Judges Sanborn, Vandevanter, Hook, and Adams were on the bench. Lawyer Kellogg opened for the government, filing a brief covering 198 printed pages for the government and a much longer one for him self. The briefs contained a history of the company and a record of the evidence secured in the various hearings in different cities. Kellogg reviewed this evidence, showing the conspiracy of had another formal conference with the ockefeller and his associates, beginning out.
